

Henry Saiz

“Labyrinths Designer E.P.”
Paradigma Musik (paradigma 006)

A: Lost in the woods
B1: Lady in the mirror
B2: From tangled seas

Format: 12”

Release date: December 10th, 2007
Digital release: December 24th, 2007
Barcode: 880319 286414

info sheet 006

The work of the Spanish artist Henry Saiz, which is our next main character, is the sixth reference of Paradigma Musik. An eclectic producer among many, Saiz has in his possession a couple of maxis from the extinct Londoner label Logical Noise, where he was exploring sounds close to techno and house in their more melodic and progressive aspect. It should also be highlighted his remix for “99 & A Half” from Phonique for the prestigious label Global Underground. This piece of information gives us an idea of the international renown of this young and promising artist.

“Labyrinths Designer E.P.” is in the line of his last productions but with a cleaner and more purified sound. “Lost In The Woods” breaks the ice with an epic and endless melody based on a four-four rhythm turning into nearly break as the minutes go by. Eight fantastic minutes in a track which lend you to close your eyes and let you go in the dance floor early in the morning or with the sunshine. “Lady In The Mirror” has maybe a more minimal style than its predecessor, although also melodic and progressive, specially from the fourth minute. At that point, a perturbing feminine voice will flow through our ears till the end of the cut. Nice, that is the word. And finally, “From Tangled Seas” completes Saiz’s proposal with another sound adventure full of melody and progression. Cosmic and elegant minimal techno, clear and beating. The finishing touch to what is expected to be the start of a prosperous friendship: the one of Henry Saiz and Paradigma. ¡We hope it will be so!.